“ASCO applauds the California legislature for being the first state body of lawmakers in the nation to consider legislation that is designed to specifically improve clinical pathways in oncology. Clinical pathways, when appropriately designed and implemented, are evidence-based treatment management tools used to support delivery of high-quality cancer care for specific patient presentations. Insurance companies, healthcare institutions, and clinicians are increasingly using clinical pathways to reduce unwarranted treatment variabilities and improve the quality of cancer care.

We support the Oncology Clinical Pathway Act (AB 1107), and believe it is an important first step toward ensuring that, in California, oncology pathways will safeguard patient access to high-quality, high-value cancer care, including the opportunity to participate in clinical trials.

The bill’s requirements that oncology pathways be developed in a transparent manner, based on scientific evidence, and conducive to patient participation in clinical trials are consistent with ASCO’s Criteria for High-Quality Clinical Pathways in Oncology, which were developed to guide the development, implementation, and assessment of clinical pathways in oncology. ASCO’s criteria also addresses additional factors that should be considered fundamental in the development and use of high-quality clinical pathways, such as including mechanisms for appropriately choosing off-pathway treatments; addressing the full spectrum of cancer care; and the ability to prescribe treatments based on specific patient characteristics and preferences.
ASCO congratulates California legislators for their leadership in laying an important foundation that will help ensure that oncology clinical pathways are designed and implemented in a manner that provides high-quality, high-value care to every patient with cancer. The state is at the forefront of what we hope will become a movement across the United States."
